

Step 1: Define your team

If you have not already defined your team, please see chapter 3, step 3: Put together and onboard a team for FbF development. If your team is not already cross-departmental, you may need to engage your national society's experts in WASH, shelter, livelihoods, and other sectors relevant to the early actions you consider.

In addition to your core team, the steps below require consultation with as wide a range of actors as possible, including community residents, community committees, civil society organizations, local and national governments and agencies, Red Cross and Red Crescent National Society branches, other humanitarian and development organizations, research institutions (including the climate science community), and the private sector.
