

Step 7: Integrate lessons learned in guidance and trainings

If your simulation has shown that certain assumptions, timelines, procedures, or arrangements of your EAP are not realistic or feasible, revise the EAP accordingly. Also make sure to note in the EAP document that you have tested certain aspects of the EAP in a simulation. This will help the validation committee in better understanding your decisions.

If you have developed guidance, e.g. a pocket EAP or other training material, make sure that you also update this material and train the staff and other stakeholders accordingly.
